

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

authority to issue such an order in the action at law, to which the widow, who had control of the body, was not a party, but that in the suit in equity, to which she was a party, such an order would be made, it being within the general powers of a court of equity, and in the furtherance of justice. In the principal case, however, the court rests its decision upon the ground that "neither the right of sepulture, nor the right to have the body remain untouched and unmolested, is an absolute and fixed right, but these rights must and should yield when they conflict with the public good or where the demands of justice require such subordination."

EVIDENCE—BURDEN OF PROOF.—In an action for the value of goods lost, and for damage to other goods, while stored in the defendant's warehouse, plaintiff made out a prima facie case by showing that he deposited the goods in the warehouse in good condition, which, on demand, the defendant failed to deliver, or else delivered in a damaged condition. The defendant requested and the court refused an instruction that the burden of proof was on the plaintiff, and that unless the weight of evidence was in favor of the plaintiff, a verdict should be returned for the defendant. Held, that the failure to give the charge requested was erroneous. Berger v. St. Louis Storage & Commission Co. (1908), — Mo. App. —, 114 S. W. 69.

This case brings up the question as to whether the burden of proof shifts from one side to the other during the course of the trial. Upon this point there is much confusion. One view of the matter is that as soon as the party upon whom the burden of proof originally rests makes out a prima facie case, the burden shifts to the other party, and if the latter makes out a prima facie defence, the burden is again shifted. Supporting this view, among other cases, are Philadelphia & Reading R. R. v. Anderson, 94 Pa. St. 351; Campbell v. McCormac, 90 N. C. 491; McKenzie v. Oregon Improvement Co., 5 Wash. 409; Succession v. Maginnis, 44 La. Ann. 1043; Meikel v. State Savings Institution, 36 Ind. 355. The view of the present case would, however, appear to be the better doctrine. The burden of proof, as defined by the court, is the duty which rests upon a party asserting the affirmative of an issue, of establishing it by a preponderance of the evidence. Thus used, it never shifts from side to side. Pease v. Cole, 53 Conn. 53; Scott v. Wood, 81 Cal. 398; Eastman v. Gould, 63 N. H. 89; Berringer v. Lake Superior Iron Co., 41 Mich. 305; Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Siefke, 144 N. Y. 354; Gay v. Bates, 99 Mass. 263; Wilder v. Cowles, 100 Mass. 487; Atkinson v. Goodrich Transportation Co., 69 Wis. 5; 2 ENC. EVI. 779. The burden of proof should be carefully distinguished from the burden of introducing evidence which may constantly shift from side to side during the course of the trial. Quite likely much of the confusion which exists on the subject is due to the failure to agree on just what is meant by the term "burden of proof."

EVIDENCE—COMPELLING ACCUSED TO CRIMINATE HIMSELF—WAIVER OF PRIVILEGE.—On his first trial for murder the defendant took the stand in his own behalf. After judgment against him he procured a new trial. At the